

(A) the difficulty of predicting—
(i) monetary responses to tax legislation,
(ii) international responses to domestic policy changes, including changes in international flows of capital,
(iii) short-term changes in the labor supply, interest rates, and savings rates,
(iv) the effect that changes in investment will have on growth rates, and
(v) changes in economic efficiencies,
(B) how significant a proposal should be in order to warrant a dynamic macroeconomic feedback estimate,
(C) under what circumstances it is appropriate to estimate microeconomic effects or sector effects even when there is no macroeconomic effect,
(D) whether it is feasible to quantify the reliability of dynamic macroeconomic feedback estimates,
(E) whether there are procedural complexities in making such estimates where such estimates involve variables outside traditional revenue models, and
(F) whether it is appropriate to make such estimates for tax legislation if such estimates are not made for other legislation.

(2) If the Joint Committee on Taxation determines that fiscal estimates of dynamic macroeconomic feedback effects of tax legislation are feasible, such study shall include examples of such estimates for several hypothetical tax policy changes.
(3) The report of such study shall be submitted not later than May 1, 1997, to—
(A) the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives,
(B) the Committee on Finance of the Senate,
(C) the Speaker, Majority Leader, and Minority Leader of the House of Representatives, and
(D) the Majority Leader and Minority Leader of the Senate.
(4) Pending completion of such study, the Joint Committee on Taxation shall continue its current practice of taking into account the following behavioral effects (among other); changes in the timing of transactions; shifts between corporate and non-corporate income; changes in the mix of employee compensation between cash and non-taxable fringe benefits; changes in relative prices and resulting shifts in demand between taxed and untaxed commodities; capital gains realization effects; and portfolio shifts between taxable and nontaxable assets.
(5) The Joint Committee on Taxation may continue its current practice of contracting with nationally recognized macroeconomic modeling firms to investigate macroeconomic feedback effects of hypothetical tax policy changes.
(c) Estimates made pursuant to this section are to be used for informational purposes only.

Before the short title at the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 312. (a) In addition to any other estimates the Director is required to make pursuant to the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Director of the Congressional Budget Office shall, upon the request of the chairman of the Committee on the Budget of the House of Representatives (after consultation with the ranking minority member of that committee), prepare an estimate for any major spending legislation, as designated by the majority leader of the House of Representatives (after consultation with the minority leader of the House), of the change in spending and revenues resulting from the legislation on the basis of assumptions that estimate the probable dynamic macroeconomic feedback effects of such legislation, and shall include a statement identifying those assumptions. Such estimates shall be submitted to the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Committee on the Budget and of the committees of subject-matter jurisdiction, and, if timely submitted, shall be included in the reports on such legislation.

(b) In addition to any other estimates the Chief of Staff is required to make pursuant to the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Chief of Staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation shall, upon the request of the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives (after consultation with the ranking minority member of that committee), prepare an analysis of any major tax legislation, as designated by the majority of the House of Representatives (after consultation with the minority leader of the House), of the change in spending and
